

Visioning the Change

The only question we have to ask ourselves is:

What type of country do we want to live in, and what kind of NZ do we want it to be?

It goes to the heart of our values, and for NZ it's always been about family, community and our beautiful natural environment. Now we have to reclaim that through Direct Democracy – it is the only Governance system that allows us to get that back.

Under Direct Democracy, we create a People's Vision, not a 3-year political Vision, and set the country's priorities going forward, along with operational plans that are open and available for all to see.

	Vision	Strategies	Operational Plans
National	We together design a Vision for what we want NZ to be	We together identify what the most important strategic priorities for NZ are	Done here only for defence, immigration, monetary policy, etc
Regional	Each Region designs a Vision unique to that geography and uniqueness: what the people want the region to be	People in each region identify the most important strategic priorities for their region.	Most is done here for Public Services, economic development, environmental protections, etc.
Local Communities	Each locality creates a Vision for its future, bringing communities back together.	Each community identifies its priorities for industries, the environment, and people.	Local projects are identified and managed through the operating plan and are part of the regional development.

The Overall Sequence is:

Our vision describes the future we want.

Our strategy explains the choices we will make to reach it.

Strategic planning brings people and evidence together to make those choices.

Our operational plans, budgets and dashboards turn those choices into accountable action.

(National – Regional – Community)

So let's get started.
